Amount of Butter in a Pound of Butter

How much butter should a pound of butter fat make? This is a question that is often asked, and one having a practical side that is important in every creamery and private dairy in the country, since, if the amount of butter is less than the quantity of fat yielded warrants, the point at which the leak occurs should be ascertained and the loss stopped. In the dairy test at the World's Fair, butter was assumed to be 80 per cent. fat, and with a given yield of butter fat, a cow was credited with that amount of butter, plus one-fifth. There are, of course, losses and gains on the butter fat in the making of butter, which in part balance each other; not all the butter fat is res covered, and not all the butter is butter fat, but the gain predominates, so that the amount of butter coming from the hands of a good butter-maker should be somewhere from 12 to 15 per cent. greater than the amount of butter fat he receives. At the recent meeting of the Association of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations, at Denver, a resolution was passed providing that in all official tests, 162 per cent. should be added to the amount of butter fat, when the puradd 16? per cent., or one-sixth, which is three fourths pounds of butter.

toward proving the contrary. One of that he will be able to transmit his good superior in appearance and quality and years. will fatten more readily than the average will be better than the scrub. The great improvement or gain in the better bred hog is in the ability to consume more food and to make a better return for it. The farmer that breeds the better pig with the expectation that he will fatten in less time with a less ration, will undoubtedly be disappointed. A pure bred pig will degenerate very rapidly if neg. lected. One advantage with a scrub hog is that he does not have far to go to reach nothingness, and in consequence will stand a considerable amount of ill treatment without a y great appreciable

To make the most out of good breed, good feed and care are essential, and they will always show to a better advantage than with the scrub. With good treat ment a well bred pig can be finished for market in from seven to nine months. while the scrub will require from twelve to fifteen to make the same weight, while the quality of the meat of the better bred pig will be much superior, and a trial carefully made will be sufficient to demonstrate this .- Texas Farm and Ranch.

Suggestive Figures.

The last week's issue of the Baltimore Manufacturers' Record contains an article on cotton production in the South, written for Harper's Weekly by Mr. Edmonds, editor of the Record. It is a very instructive article, full of suggestive facts and figures, and is at the same time a splendid testimonial to the industry, energy and perseverance of the Southern farmer.

He describes the progress of cotton culture from the year 1790, when about 2,000,000 pounds were produced, the stimulus given the industry by the inven tion of the Whitney gin in 1775, resulting in an increase in the ten years from 2,000,000 pounds in 1790 to 40,000,000 in 1800; 80,000,000 pounds in 1810 and 160, 000,000 pounds in 1820. The growth was continuous and rapid, until the crop of 400,000 bales in 1820 increased to 1,634,954 bales in 1840; 2,454,441 in 1850; 3,849,469 in 1860; 4,352,317 in 1870; 6,605,570 in 1880; 8,652,597 in 1890; 7,549,817 in 1893 4 and 9,901,251 in

The high prices at the end of the war, when the supply of American cotton was almost exhausted, stimulated the industry again and even when the prices began to fall the increased production went on, the planters apparently acting on the principle that the lower the price 1893. Certainly no crop grown in this country and probably not in the world can show so steady, continuous and large increase as this. The giving of so much attention to the other things has been commented upon a SOLD INgood deal, and pretty generally pronounced a bad policy, but this wasn't altegether the fault of the planter, nor altogether according to his choice, for after the war he was in a measure forced to raise cotton, or nothing. Up to 1860 Southern planters raised their own sup-plies, and there was little, if any, foodstuff imported from other States. With slave labor they raised all on the farm that was needed, and the cotton crop was a money crop. But the average planter who owned slaves was a good liver, believed in enjoying life, spent his giving away. Very Respectfully, money freely, and but little of the money of one crop remained with him when the next crop was planted. But with the end of the war came a change. The labor system was revolutionized and could be no longer martialed and controlled as it had been. The South found herself without money, much of the country devasted by opposing armies; horses, mules, cattle swept away, but few if any farming implements, no money to buy them with, with little to money to buy them with, with little to With the present price of leather, these shoes offer as security for money needed, and will cost more than this to make, with the ad-

raised with the means that could be commanded, and that was the only field crop that could command an advance of money. Cotton buyers, commission merchants and others who were anxious to handle cotton, who had money or credit, advanced money to aid in making cotton crops and thus thousands of planters who without such aid would have been able to do but little, succeeded in raising crops, but while they did this they had to buy their flour, corn, meat, etc., from the West and pay high prices for them, for they couldn't get any advances to raise them. even if they wanted to, and at the end of the year after the cotton crop was sold, the money borrowed paid back, and store bills settled they had little it anything to their credit. And so they kept on year after year, compelled to depend upon advances to raise cotton, the only crop upon which advances would be made, and increasing the acreage with the hope of making a big crop to work out. But the

The necessity which compelled planters o turn their attention to something else than cotton has been a blessing in dispose was to determine from a test of guise which is now beginning to be milk, the amount of butter that could be realized, and will be more fully realized made from a cow's daily yield. For the more general diversified farming beexample, if a cow yields thirty pounds of comes. But cotton will still continue in 5 per cent. milk per day, this makes a pound and a half of butter fat. Cotton is a great crop, and with diver-sified farming may be made a still greater one. How great it is and has been is There are yet plenty of farmers who shown by the statement that since 1875 are skeptical as to the merits of well we have exported $4,000,000,000 worth bred pigs.
